Carnegie Institute, a private postsecondary school in Troy, Michigan. Carnegie Institute School of Allied Health Technology Since 1947. Their mission is to assess areas of need in health care support services for the purpose of developing specialized accredited programs that lead to national certification and professional recognition of the graduates. Since 1947, thousands of Carnegie graduates have completed specialized programs to join working health care professionals in medical offices, clinics, hospitals and related positions in industry. Carnegie’s time-tested philosophy of education has anticipated training requirements for the allied health support services in Michigan since 1947. Thousands of multi-skilled graduates are making a difference as quality contributors in a wide range of health career services. Read more…